Art show attracts artistic crowd to studio

Artist Anne Orton delighted her fans by sending out hand painted and signed invitations for an art show and party at her studio on Metcalfe Street.

The Ottawa artist with a sense of humor sold tickets for a door prize of one of her drawings. Popsy Johnstone, wife of Canada's Consul General in New York, sent along her $5 door prize money with a friend.

Among those who came along for the Friday afternoon show were Bryden Smith, assistant director of the National Gallery; William Kirby, director of the Canada Council's Art Bank; artists Pat Durr, Shirley Van Dusen, Jane Martin and Betty Davison along with her husband Arthur; businessman Ned Rhodes and his wife Liz; and the Art Bank's Leona Quiring and Lisa Cohen.

Mina Cohen, who was sworn in Tuesday as a new citizenship court judge for Eastern Ontario, came along with her daughter.

Gyde Shepherd, assistant director at the National Gallery, was felled by a cold that day and sent along a bottle of wine.

Close to 50 guests went to the residence of Swedish Ambassador Ola Ullstom Sunday for a reception to greet members of the Cullberg Ballet, in town for two performances.

Among the guests were prima ballerina Ana Laguna and Mats Ek, a choreographer and son of the company's founder Birgit Cullberg.

Also there were Peter Boneham from Le Groupe de la Place Royale, Jane Morris from the NAC, all the ambassadors from the Nordic countries and businessman Alfred Friedman and his wife Kysa who hails from Stockholm.

There wasn't a starving musician in the house Friday night when restaurateur Dave Smith threw open the doors of his home to friends and members of the Nepean Symphony Orchestra following their concert at the Sir Robert Borden Concert Hall.

Smith's front hall is quite a conversation piece. Instead of signing a guest book, visitors have fun writing their names on the wall.

Smith provided a spread of smoked salmon and cream cheese sandwiches, hot smoked meat on rolls and chocolate fondue with strawberries.

Nepean Mayor Ben Franklin and his wife Shirley came along for the fun, along with Colin Patterson, president of Gandalf Data Ltd, which sponsored the concert; Russel Butler, president of the orchestra's board of directors, and his wife Valerie; Charles Chadwick from the British High Commission, and his wife Evelyn; an orchestra member, Marion Davis, fundraising director of the organization; and John and Elizabeth Adjeleian whose son Paul plays the trombone with the orchestra.

Members of the venerable Institut Canadien-Francais d'Ottawa, the oldest French-speaking men's club in North America, held a special reception Sunday to honor 33 Franco-Ontarians from the area who received last year's bi-centennial medal for outstanding volunteer work.

Among those honored were Edgar Viau, Eugene Brunet, Joe Gariepy, Leo Paquette, Henri Laperriere, Enee Bordelean, the Rev. Maurice Tussault, Gertrude Lemire, Thérèse Frée and Yvette Bigras.
