

Robbery suspect remanded

An Ottawa youth, charged with armed robbery, whose bid for freedom was cut short by two warning shots Tuesday night appearing in city magistrate's court this morning and was remanded to Dec. 13 for plea.

John Lamoureux, 20, of 454 Gilmour St., a husky youth with light curly hair, has been charged with the $5,200 holdup last Friday at the Royal Bank of Canada branch, First Avenue at Bank Street.

Lamoureux had been arrested about noon Tuesday after police fired a warning shot during a chase through the Glebe.

The man later escaped from a second-floor office in the Waller Street police station where he was being questioned by police about 7 p.m., ran out the front door of the building, down Besserer Street and was caught a block from the station at Cumberland Street, after pursuing police fired two warning shots.

At vocational centre Lamoureux had been arrested in the noon-hour Glebe chase after he was spotted at the Canadian Vocational Training Program Centre, 268 First Ave., by police who had been watching the centre and his residence for two days.

Friday a man entered a Royal bank at 12.40 p.m. and placed a cardboard box on a counter in front of a teller.

He tipped the open box to reveal a gun and demanded money. He was handed $5,200 in cash and escaped.

Sazio comes to defence of Ted Watkins

HAMILTON (CP) — Coach Ralph Sazio of Hamilton Tiger-Cats came out in defence of one of his stars today, after Ted Watkins revealed that he advocates black power and said there is racial discrimination in Canada.

"Ted's views haven't changed my opinion of him in any way," said Sazio.

"He said nothing that was detrimental to the team nor did he offend any individual. Ted is an intelligent boy who tends to be quiet, but is an intense competitor . . ."

Watkins, a Chicago-born Negro split end with the Grey Cup champion Tiger-Cats, gave his opinions on the national CBC-TV program The Public Eye.

Ottawa French leaders happy with report

Ottawa French-Canadian leaders are very happy with the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism made public Tuesday.

"This report is long overdue and the recommendations should be implemented as soon as possible," said Albert Brisson, president of the 800-member Institut Canadien-francais d'Ottawa.

"There is a great need to implement the recommendations," said Raulo Boyer, president of the Ontario federation of the St. Jean Baptiste Society.

"If the recommendations are implemented quickly, then they could stem the tide of separatism," he said. "The report seemed to cover almost every problem encountered by French-speaking Canadians," said lawyer Pierre Mercier, president of Lower Town Urban Renewal Association. "Their findings that Ottawa is one of the worst beds of anti-bilingualism is certainly true.

"It is the first step in the right direction and includes everything we have been saying for years. If anybody now asks what we want we can show it to them. It is all in the report.

"If the report will not lead to national unity, nothing will."

"If Ontario is to become bilingual, there is no doubt in my mind that Ottawa should become bilingual," said Ald. Jules Morin.

But he was a little lukewarm to the idea of establishing a bilingual federal district.

"We should discuss the system of government before anything else."

The other leaders contacted agreed with this. "It all depends on what type of a federal district is established," said Mr. Mercier.

An empty sack or happiness?

Santa's sack will be empty for needy children in the Ottawa area this Christmas — unless the Christmas Exchange receives 3,000 more gifts and stocking stuffers, or the money to buy them.

The Exchange works in co-operation with health, welfare, religious and service organizations in Greater Ottawa to ensure that the needy have a special Christmas dinner and all children have a gift.

This year they hope to help 5,500 families and individuals with cash donations or food vouchers. More than 7,500 gifts are needed for the children — 3,000 are yet to be donated.

The Toy Centre, operated by the Exchange, urgently requires either the gifts or the money to buy them if it is to supply all the hopeful families coming next week to choose one new toy or present for each child under 16. Gifts for boys and girls aged 10 to 15 are in particularly short supply. In addition thousands of smaller items are needed for Christmas stockings.

Collection boxes for the toys are set up at locations around the city, including The Citizen's Sparks Street lobby. Cash donations, deductible for income tax, may be sent to the Christmas Exchange, 85 Plymouth Street, Ottawa 1.

Heart transplant man faces critical period

CAPE TOWN (CP) — A crucial seven-day period started today for South African Louis Washkansky, in which his body must accept or reject a new heart given him Sunday.

There was no sign so far that his body tissues would reject the heart transferred from 25-year-old Denise Darvall in an historic five-hour operation after the young woman was killed in an auto accident.

Washkansky, a diabetic, continued to improve today, started telling jokes and told a nurse, "I am a new Frankenstein."

His general condition is satisfactory and all signs show improvement, a hospital bulletin said. "His heart is functioning normally."

Washkansky's wife has been advised to wait a week before seeing her husband to avoid any chance of infection.

Diabetes watched

"I am not endangering my husband for anything in the world," said Mrs. Washkansky. "I want to see him in health again."

Washkansky's diabetes was being watched carefully.

"Diabetics are naturally more liable to infection and complications after surgery than a normal person," said Professor Jan H. Louw.

Professor Christopher Barnard, who headed the surgical team for the operation, said a Cape Town recipient may be the next recipient of a transplanted heart.

Washkansky will be home in three weeks if his progress continues at its present rate, Barnard said.

He told a press conference Washkansky would be better off at home. "Hospitals are where germs are and the chances of infection would consequently be greater," he said.

City hall co-operated

B-B claim annoying

City Hall has reacted sharply to a claim that board of control refused to co-operate with the Royal Commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Only two members of board of control, Mayor Reid and Con. E. D. Webber, are in Ottawa today.

Both said they wanted to study the full report before making comment on its recommendations affecting the capital area.

Sharp annoyance

Privately, there was sharp annoyance at the commission for suggesting the city had not co-operated.

City Hall gave all civic employees permission to meet B and B officials and to answer any question or questionnaire they wished. The degree of co-operation with the B and B group was left strictly up to each employee.

"To call this a lack of co-operation is absurd," said Controller Webber. "We gave every employee our blessing to do exactly as he wished."

Anticipating the B and B report, Controllers Murray Heit and Ernie Jones put themselves on record before leaving Ottawa on civic business earlier this week.

Both believe the city should follow whatever course a majority of its residents choose.

"We do not want anything forced on us, whether it is bilingualism, biculturalism or anything else," said Con. Heit.

Con. Kenneth Fogarty reached last night, said some sections of the report had merit and he wanted an opportunity to study them further.

It is generally believed City Hall would have no objection and, in fact, would welcome the creation of a National Capital area as long as provincial and municipal boundaries and local government authorities were left intact.

Mayor Reid remained firm this morning in the face of press urging to comment on the basis of newspaper reports of the Commission's findings.

Youth sets himself on fire

NEW YORK (AP) — A young man remained in critical condition today after setting himself afire last night on a lawn in front of the United Nations building.

Police said Kenneth D'Elia, 20, of Flushing, Queens, offered no explanation for his act.

Witnesses said they saw D'Elia climb a five-foot fence, run to an adjacent lawn, pour gasoline over himself from a two-gallon metal container and strike a match.

Two passers by and a patrolman beat out the flames with their overcoats. At Bellevue Hospital he was reported to have third-degree burns on 80 per cent of his body.

Union ends U.K. train slowdown

LONDON (AP) — A two-day slowdown that tied up much of southern England's rail traffic ended early today when the union accepted a peace formula proposed by Prime Minister Wilson.

Officials of the 36,500-member Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen talked through the night before ordering their members to work at normal speed today.

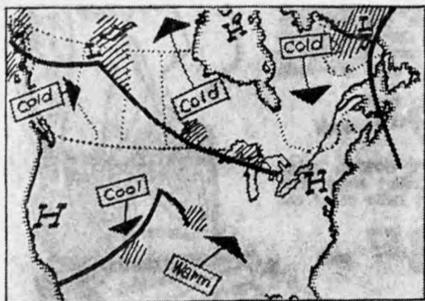

In what Labor Minister Ray Gunter called "the silliest dispute of this decade," the ASLEF members had been observing every time-consuming rule in the book to protest the stationing of brakemen from the rival National Union of Railwaymen — NUR — in the rear of diesel locomotives.
